Look Before You Leap

A fox was walking near a well. Somehow, he accidently slipped and fell in it. It was not a deep well. Yet, he tried his best to get out but could not.

At that time a very thirsty goat passed by the well and saw the fox inside. She asked the fox what he was doing there. The cunning fox replied that he had jumped into the well himself to drink the sweet, cold water. He asked the goat to come down and have some of the cool water.

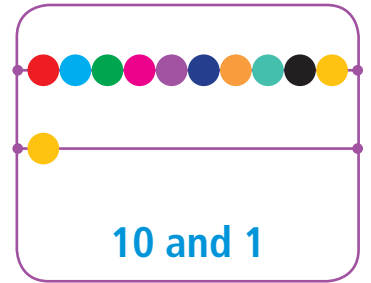

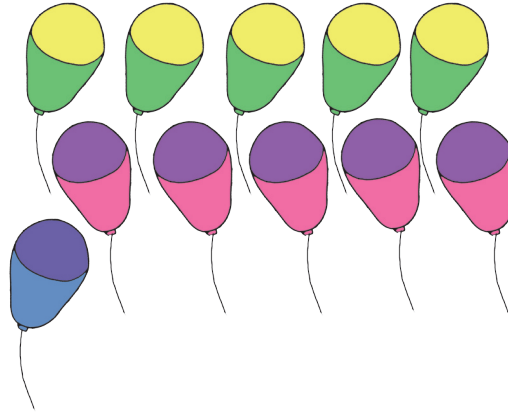

Without thinking of the result, the goat jumped into the well. The cunning fox at once jumped on her back, and with another jump he was out of the well. The fox smiled at the poor goat and went his way leaving behind the goat trapped in the well.
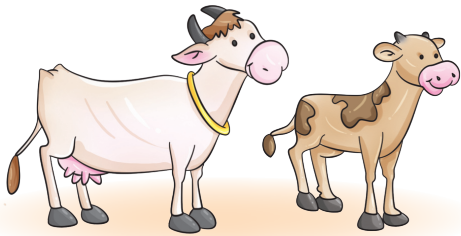

Moral: Look before you leap.
